

Iconoclast's Community Arts program teaches creative approaches to real-world problems. This arts program is funded and supported by the community, making art class available to students whose school has no funding for teaching visual art and the creative process. The program focuses on many aspects of creativity, including exploration, observation, evaluation, brainstorming, expression, decision-making, and reflection. Activities are paired with real-world applications, which boost student initiative, inquiry, and leadership skills.

Integrated Curriculum

Visual Arts- Practicing skills based on art masters and movements.

Social Emotional Learning- Practicing awareness, expression, and creative problem solving.

Innovation / STEAM application- Learning about innovations in various fields and connecting creative problem solving with the skills practiced in class.
